The 26th instant I wrote you by a Dingey bound to Muscat, informing you that the troops which I fent to reinforce Telli-cherry arrived fafe, and landed the auth ult. and Major Abingdor, with those and a part of their former garrison, marched our from the Bras. Pageda the 8th initiant, ar four Al M. agross the Barry grounds to the callward and paffed two of the enemy's advanced posts or pickets, and got round to the castward of Great Putney fill, between that and Ponnolla Mella. The advanced party under Captain Whippey immediately attacked, flormed and took the former, without the loss of a man on our fide: The main body immediately pulled for the camp of the enemy, and came upon them just at break of day, whom they fell on, and immediately put to the nours, when they followed them to the fouthward as far as Currachee, a finall fost about one mile to the northward of Minie triver; this post they prefently carried, and turned its guns upon the enemy, who were making the belt of their way towards the river. Saddos Cawn, who made this poll his head quatters quitted and got to a fortified house, and, enclosed within walls, can out of a hill, where he, with feveral of his people, made an obstinate desence; but at last the roof of the house was let on fire, which obliged them to quit it, when many were killer endeavouring to make their eleape. Saddos Cawn had legging himfell in part of the englishing which was bomb proof, quanto the hill, when he and his family were found; himfelf had been wounded by a mufquet ball in the ancle, and was not able to move. all immediately feized, and fent in priloners to Tallicially, with about 1500 priloners, which had been made during the morn, There was about to one the enemy killed and drowned. On our fide there was not above repended and wounded; and MAT St. S. W only one of our officers hurt, which was Lieutenant Woodington. We took fix brak field pieces, about buty iron camon, and four mortars, thirteen elephants, and a large quantity of fhot, powder, flores, see, in their redoubts and batteries.

The fame evening, about feven o clock, Lieutenant Hogges was fent with a ftrong detachment against Fort George, which the enemy getting intelligence of they evacuated the fore, and he took quiet policilion of it. About two o'clock in the morning a body was fear over and took policilion of Minie.; and another party, under Captain Whipley, went over and took policilion of Durmapatam, which island they found deforted by the enemy. In thort, there is not a man of Hyder's left between pint five lengues to the fouthward, and to the northward as far as Cannanore. This was a very complete business.

All the vessels that were expected to arrive here by Captain Alms have arrived; the Nancy tender was the last, and she arfived yesterday morning. All the rell, except the Porposic storeship, Elizabeth, Eagle snow, and Nancy transports, have all failed to join the squadron. Lond Maken declared that bill should have his most hearty support; militia was the most constructional protection; and as he considered lingtand and scotland one island, and one people, he knew of no reason that could possibly be given to shew why Scotland was not entitled to a militie, as well as England. of Graham supported the bill in a short, elegant speech pointing out a milltin as being necessary, at this instant, to the fafety of Scotland.

Sir Charles Turner declared his disapprobation of all militias: If necessity called for an augmentation of land forces, why not add to the army? but the militia, he said, was neither composed of soldiers nor

Commodore Johnstone requested the chair would explain to him a difficulty, which he was not himled able to folve. He understood from the Gazette, that his Majesty had been pleased to raise Sir George Radney to the dignity of a Baron; he wanted to know therefore, whether Sir George's feat in the House of Commons might now be whether Sir George's feat in the House of Commons might now be cinfidered as vacant. Another question that arose in his mind upon this head was—Whether the King had a right to make any man a. Péer without his own consent, or against his will? If it should be answered by the Georgemen of the Long Robe, that there is such a power in the Crown, he would acquise but at the same time must say, that such a power was hig with mischief to this country: He begged to suppose a case, if the King had been pleased to call decreasing gentleman in his eye (Mr Fox) to the House of Peers, about eight weeks, ago, the late revolution in the Ministry would, in all probability, never have taken place. Such a power in the Crown, might be used to the very world of purposes; A minister might sid himself of every formidable opponent in that House by foreing a Peerage on him; may, it might be employed to the most insquirous purposes; A, in, a case. it might be employed to the most iniquitous purposes, as, in a cale, like that of Mrs Shebbeare, where, if a woman was restrained by will from marrying a Peer, a Minister, in order to preventher marrying a Commoner, whom she liked, should make that Commoner a Peer. But there was another ease, in which it might also be an instrument of the most flagrant injudice: There was then on the table a report from a private Committee, replete with charges against the Admiral; now, his being called up to the House of Peers would deprive him af the privalege of defending himself in that House where the charge originated. He did not mean to infimute, that his Majesty simultees had any such charges had any such charges and therefore wished to know, what was the law upon the subjects in the charge of the charge or wind the charge of the charge the law allowed fuch a power, he should then consider Sir Georg Rodney as a Peer, and move for a new writ for the city of West

Rodney as a Peer, and move for a new writ for the city of West-miniter.

Mr. For faid, he should have been wanting to his constituents, if he had not turned his thoughts already to that subject! He had spoken to mans gentlemen of the long robe, whose general opinion was, that the King had the power to make a man a petr, even against his will; but that in tuch a case, the Crown must do it by wist. The case feemed to be different, when the petrage is conferred by patent; as it depends upon the perion who is the object of the pecage granted, whether he will take our the patent or not. As it was not proper, however, that so great a city as Westminster should remain long without its full representation; if he could hear, from any authority, that Sir George Rodney would accept the peerage, he would, upon that authority, more the House for a new writ for Westminster; and when he should get such authority, he would make the motion in a full House, that the House might judge whether the authority was sufficient:

The Speaker said, that the distinction between the will and the patent did not immediately strike-him, though perhaps it might be right. As to the case immediately before the House, he must say, that the King's pleasure in all matters of patent is rever irrecessally known tillist has passed the Great Sub-genery survivour granted by the Crown may be revoked or cancelled in any stage, prior to that of passing the Great Sub-genery survivour granted by the Crown may be revoked or cancelled in any stage, prior to that of passing the Great Sub-genery survivour granted by the Crown may be revoked or cancelled in any stage, prior to that of passing the Great Sub-genery survivour granted by the Crown may be revoked or cancelled in face the answer of the Great Sub-genery survivour granted by the Crown may be revoked or cancelled in one of some one who becomes a peer, he is al-

Extract of differ from London, May 31, 10 in This day, the Lords heard Council on the appeal of hard le Grand, Efq. of Bonnytown, in the process of dice brought before the Commissaries of Edinburgh, at the ace of Mrs Maria Steuart his wife, against him, when ance of Mrs Maria Steuart his wife, against him, when it Lordships were pleased to affirm the interlocators of the ministries, and of Lord Kennet Ordinary on the Bills appled from. Council for the appellant, Mr Harding and Mrskine, Mr Chalmers Solicitor: For the respondent, Mr Ras d Mr Macdonald, Mr Spottifwood Solicitor.

Yesterday being the anniversary of his Majesty's birth-day, see he entered into the 45th year of his age, was observed with the atmost demonstrations of joy. In the morning, re with the utmost demonstrations of joy. In the morning, a flag from the Castle was displayed. At noon, the great as were fired, which was returned by the South Fencibles awn up on the Caftle-hill; and feveral rounds of the New httery at Leith were fired. At the same time the music-bells here fet a-ringing. In the afternoon, the Lord Provost, Ma-istrates, and Council, attended by a number of Noblemen and centlemen of diffinction, with the Officers of the army, and the rained Bands, affembled in the Parliament House, where they sank his Majesty's health, with a variety of other loyal courts, nder repeated flourishes of trumpets, and vollies of small arms om the City Guard, drawn up in the Parliament Close. Af-

At one o'clock, the Edishurges Designative Band may d, in complete uniform, to Herriot's Green, where, after reours, they paid the fame compliments to his Grace the Duke Buccleugh, who was so obliging as to attend in character of eir reviewing General. The Band then went through their mole manceuvres, firings, and evolutions, to the great fatisfac-ion of the Duke, the Lord Provolt, as well as of a numerous and brilliant company affembled on the occasion. The comord for the three last vollies by Mr Crobie, their Lieutenant Colonel. The whole concluded with three cheers, in honour of the day. The Lord Provoit, upon this occasion, appeared treffed in complete uniforn, and was very filendidly attended by a numerous fliew of fine Ladies, several of the Nobility, Clergy, Lawyers, and Officers of the Army. The Band af-terwards direct together, Mr Crosbie in the chair, who acquired himself, in that character, with those abilities for which he s fo eminently diffingnished in every capacity. After dinner, great variety of loyal and constitutional toals were drank; In the interval between the toatts, feveral fongs were capitally fung by Mr Hallion, Mr Marshall, and other Gentlemen of the Band, as well as by some Gentlemen who were invited to par-take of the entertainment. Neweral suverite airs were also admirably performed by the Band of Mune, particular-ly two Solas on the violincello, by Mr Reinagle, which gave great and universal suits faction. In thorr, nothing could exceed the mirth and harmony which prevailed during the whole evening. The Reverend Mr John Touch being one of the gentleman invited. the gentlemen invited, a motion was made by a member, that he should be appointed Chaplain to the Band, which meeting with the approbation of the whole Company, he was according. ly chosen, and, in a short speech, very politely thanked, the Curps for the honour they had conferred upon him.

We are authorifed to infere the following paragraph: Our readers may remember a cause of very general impor-tance to the liberty of the subject, which was decided in the Court of Session last winter.—Charles Mercer of Lethendy, Esq; chief of his name, had a favourus and well-approved fer-Esq; chief of his name, had a ravourus and arrival rant called John Duff, who (as was alledged, from private vant called John Duff, who a find and to be a foldier by Mr pique against his master) was adjudged to be a soldier by Mr Mercer of Aldie, Mr Smyth of Balhary, and others, Justices of Peace of Perthshire, to the number of nine, and was actually dragged to America. It being considered, that this sentence of adjudication was at once an insult to Charles Mercer, Esq; for he attested his fervant's good character, and a cruel injury to the fervant, an action was brought, concluding for 50 l. flerling of dimages from each of the Juliees; and oults of fuit; claims which were not thought too high, as one Middiefex Justice had been condemned in 100 l. sterling for only imprisoning a porter in London, under the pretext of this fame adjudging act. The Court of Seffing declared the fentence to be arbitrary and oppositive, but found no damages at all due to Mr Mercer, and only 40 l. Iterling from the whole Bench of Justices due to John Duff; while, at the same time; the account of expenses really and truly laid but in a long lither gation, was curtailed upwards of 30 l. During the present valuation, it was expected that the Justices would have voluntarily paid a handfome indemnification; but this has not been the case; and information has been received, that poor Jolin Duff is dead of the wounds which he received fighting under Lord Cornwallis... The cause, therefore, is to be carried by appeal to the Mouse of Lords, by Charles Mercer, Esq; and John Duff's nearest in kin; and the event of it is now the more interesting, both from the melaneboly circumstance that the unhappy young man has lost his life; and that although the adjudication act should not be renewed, the impress act for the navy still continues in force, and a militia act may soon be pashat it is of the utmost consequence to have the liberty of the subject as fully ascertained on the north as on the fourth fide of the Tweed.

Ediaburgh, and all those who may addere to them, on the vote being carried in favour of the first Address moved for in the General Assembly Saturday for entight, in preserves to the scond Address moved for and supported by these Gentlemen and others:

Prims, BECAUSE the hipporters of the first address, as it is denominated in the state of the vote, have conducted the whole of their operations in a most irregular manner, and with an evident view to avail themselves of a groundless objection in point of form, in order to quash an address which they were on willing to combat upon its meritar. For, when the Rev. Mr Porteous had moved, "That a Committee should be appointed to draw up, an humble address to his Majesty, on the preferst late of public white;"—which most on wretnamy reconsider forms. should be appointed to draw up an humble address to his Majetty, on the present state of public offairs,"—which motion was regularly second—a proposal was then made. That the drawing up of the address should be remitted to the Committee that had been appointed to answer the King's letter; and this proposal basing been agreed to, Mr Porteons was added to the Committee, of which he had not been an original member. In an after speech, an attempt was made to fritter away the motion, by representing it as only respecting the late victories obtained by his Majetty's arms; and a minute was made out by the Glerk upon this idea, confining the remit to the Committee accordingly. When this minute was read out by the Clerk, it was immediately objected to by Mr-Porteous, and those who had seconded and supported him; and, after form time spent in debate, the original motion was entered on record. The Committee having met in coroningly. When this minute was read out by the Clerk, it was immediately objected to by Mr-Porteous, and thous who had feconded and forported him; and, after force time spent in debate, the original motion was entered on record. The Committee having met in the evening, Mr Porteous producted a draw ho of an address, which the Committee refused to take under their consideration, alledging that it had been usual to sub-committee. The Moderator and Mr Porteous were then appointed a sub-committee. The Moderator and Mr Porteous were then appointed a sub-committee, who next day reported that they shad met, and disagreed in their sentiments, and that each had prepared a separate draught of an address, which were presented and read; and a motion being made, that both should be transmitted to the Committee of Overtures, it was institled on, that the fanction of the Committee of Overtures, it was institled on, that the fanction of the Committee of Overtures, it was institled on, that the fanction of the Committee of the first of the strength of the fanction of the Committee of Overtures, it was institled on, that the fanction of the Committee of the factor of the factor of the committee being called, it carried, by a majority of the Committee; that the address presented by the Moderator should be received as the address approved of by the Committee, and the other returned to Mr Porteous produced, and trad this draught to an address association and the Committee of Overtures transmitted to the Assembly were received to the committee of Overtures transmitted to the Assembly were received to the committee of Overtures transmitted to the Assembly were received to the addession and the committee of Overtures transmitted to the Assembly were received to an eddession of the Committee of Overtures transmitted to the Assembly were received as and the confession of the Committee of Overtures transmitted to the Assembly were received to present the profession of the Committee of Overtures transmitted to the Assembly were received mittee being made in the Committee of Overtures, Mr Porteous produced and read his draught of an address also; and the Committee of Overtures transmitted to the Assembly both address, the one as the support of the Committee appointed to prepare the address, and the other funktions to that the Assembly were regularly in possession of both address. Nevertheless, one great argument ased in favour of what is called, in the slate of the vote, the fust address, was. That it was an address that came regularly before the Assembly, through the Channel of the Committee, appointed by them; whereas the other was only the work of a private man, as if the Assembly were obliged to adopt every erroneous and defective opinion of a Committee, without allowing its errors or elects to be corrected, on the motion of an individual member of Assembly properly seconded.

Secondo, We cannot but express our highest disapprehation of another argument employed in savour of the first gidness, and against the broads viz. That it is inconsilient with the condition of this Vertural Assembly, and contrary to practice, to address the Throne on events of a political nature, in which the Church is not immediately concerned. We first it is time to end of the many valuable privileges which we enjoy as citizens of this free country, that every body of men, whether civil or ecclesialical, are entitled to approach the Throne with their cettiments on every thiped, in which they consider the interest of the nation to be concerned: And although we should indeed think it unbecoming the Assembly of this frational Church to use this privilege, by prefurming either to advise the Crown to any particular measures, or to remonstrate against them, where the interest of the Church does not interfere; yet, when measures have already been taken, which, in our apprehension, are of the deepest importance to the common westare, we consider it not only as our right, but as our bounden dury, in common with their faithments and in the present of this Venerable Assembly, annis, and however cordially we join in congratulating his Majelly thereupon, yet, in addressing the chrone on the present fine of public affairs, we cannot confine ourselves to this single event, and pass over thercupon, yet, in addressing the brinds in the event, and pass over in flence other events which we eftern as greatly more important than the most brilliant victory atchieved by the food. We have feen within the space of a very tew years, this once flourishing country involved in war with her own colonies. We have feen those colonies, by the affiliance of the three greatest maritime powers in Europe, sparated from the empire. We have feen some of our most valuable islands conquered, our armies captured, and the firstiful fleets no longer ride triumphant on the ocean. In this dreadful and alarming situation of public allairs, we have feen our most gracious boveressen, in compliance with the wishes of his people, signified to thin the he most continuous manner by their representatives in Parliament, take into his tutional manner by their representatives in Parliament, take into his immediate fervice men of the highest abilities, and posselling the confidence of the people. We have feen his Majerty, during the short period which has fince chapied, adopting the most providing nature for temoving public diffrest, averting impending danger; and refloring the professity of the empire; from which we cannot but hope that, by Divine highing, the dark chools that long hung over an will foot be dispersed, the dispits of the Crown maintained, the turnshaping of the necole the dignity of the Crown maintained, the true happiness of the people focused, and the calamitles of war be succeeded by the comforts of peace, and the bleffings of good government. Under these impressions we cannot help considering an address on the state of public offairs, in which no notice is taken of these great and important events, as inconsistant with the very nature of site of an address, and these pressure runs of the remit to the Committee. Nor can we view the results of the Assembly to adopt another address, in which sittable expressions of our latisfaction. the dignity adopt another address, in which faitable expressions of our fatisfuction in the means thus used, and the measures thus taken, for such valuable ends and purposes, but as a treit disapprobation thereof, with which we hold it meansitement out duty to our Sovereign and our country even in appearance to concur. We farsher infish, that the above expressions, which were the only ground of objection to the address in support of which we contended, contain a proper constitutional idea, sit to be conveyed to the Royal ear by the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland the members of which as Presysterians, and as the glorious Revolution, and at the father of the Crown on the illustrious house of Hanover, cannot, with propiety, express a doubt, that the voice of the people ought to have its full weight in the government of the Britis realmost and that that voice is legally the government of the British traines and that that voice is legally and conflictionally expressed by the representatives of the prople in Parliament assembled.

FOR THE CALEDONIAN MERCURY. Speech intended to have been delivered in the General Assembly, upon the motion for an Address to his Majesty.

MODERATOR,

WHEN we introduce fecular matters into an address from this House, I know of no limitation over the subject. this House, I know of no limitation over the subject, scept such as are suited by common sense and propriety. Addresses are a legal means of expressing our sentiments upon subjects that are important and interesting. During a wretched Administration of sixteen years, the French seet was snamefully allowed to recover from a state of non-existence; and at this very hour, the narion looks with horror at the precipical before her eyes. Nothing but infatuation, on the part of De Graffe, prevented his junction with the Spaniards. If this measure had been pursued, Jamaica was gone; neither would there have remained to us a place in that quarter we could have called our own. Rodney's glorious victory I consider as an interpolation of Divine Providence in our favour. It is our duty, both as a Court and as individuals, to be grateful as miel . Te Almighty God for the respite we have got. Let us, in the fane time, however, remember the command of rendering unto Cafar the things that are Cafar's.

The King has been pleafed to difinish is ferrants for mitconduct. Impotent, blustering, and improvident, their system and execution were alike erroneous. The King has been pleafed to call into his fervice men of a very different complexion f Peace with Holland, peace with America, rigid economy, in order to bring forth every possible exertion against France; fuch are the declared principles of the present system. It is by such means only, under God, that we can be saved.

Most grateful thanks are due to the King for the late change of men and of measures; and therefore I move that it shall stand as part of our address: Edin. May 29. NERVA.

To the Publisher of the Caledonian Mercury.

WERE not the people of this country to outragious against the grievance of patronage, I think I could suggest to them grievances which more immediately concern them. I am a traveller, Sir, and I speak as I seel, and as I know. I hope other travellers will do the same. Spiritual concerns are all a Scotman's care; at least, from the frequent parochial all a Segman's care; at lean, from the frequent paroconal meetings of the country, it would appear io. Were these disped miguided people to meet occasionally, and give in a true state of the public roads of their respective parishes, their patrons would perhaps give them more credit for what they say. I am sure I should. I am of those, Sir, who have frequent-I am fure I should. I am of those, Sir, who have frequented the Carlisse road by Mosfat these many years, but never before saw it in such a deplorable struction. This whole winter it has been in many places impassable. For sout or sive miles above Beild, the water from the hills (which one labouring man in half a day could effectually prevent) centers all in the middle of the road, and your horse wades all that way to the knees. At Broughton-bridge, there is a piece of road new formed indeed; God knows when it will be sinissed.—Blyth-bridge, which was broken down by the violence of the current three or four months ago, is yet unrepaired.—Over Lincon water, and several others which I cannot name, there are no bridges at all. These, Sir, I call grievances; and I call upon the widels or tamest man in the parish to prove the contrary: the wildest or tamest man in the parish to prove the contrary; and yet, except in very extraordinary cases, a plank of eighteen feer by five would to a great measure remedy them. There is also another grievance which I would beg leave to mention. The labels which fland in feveral places where the road di-vides, and which were no doubt legible when first erected, are now totally obliterated. If the people of Scotland would petishould meet my hearty concurrence. In the mean time,

I am, SIR, Your most humble Servant,
